

Poetry Section

Poems by Dr. Saurabh Mishra

Trance in Past

In brazing sun and dry wind

When the drop of sweat makes the eye blink

The vision dawns, into the past life

Making the old memories ripe

The child's instant cry and the parents sincere try,

The jingle bells and joy on the face that foretells,

Teacher's lessons and the schools bell,

All come alive in the past's well

The jubilant youth and flirting truths

Partying and treats, with dance on music beats

The mass bunk and the subjects flunk

The grades on sheet, and the liters drunk

The contest for employment, and the first job

The boss's whim and the jobs' dross

Thoughts about daily cores put to test

With creativity and zest to create the best

Marriage: bells and the tummy swells

Wife dwells and the social rills

The self is reborn-when the children arrive

Then the age puts on only memories survive

Time

Time is near yet far,

It is here and there and flies afar

Time is good & bad; sweet & sour

It's broad & narrow; valued & there go

Time defines: day and night; noon & evening

Its hours and minutes that pass by

Time is- life, so important and even seconds a trivial thing

It flashes and dashes; comes and leaves

Time carves: King's leisure and workman's pleasure

It is healthy man's delight and a patient's nightmare

Time is precious memories galore and sad events frore

It's creativity's desire and destructions bonfire

Time is clouds that flies by
It's moments we live by
Time is eternity that encompasses us all
It is the web through which our lives stroll

The strongest yet submissive of all
Time is god's gifted power to us all
Tombs of history or futures womb
Time is one venture which never dooms

Saurabh Mishra, Assistant Professor of English, a doctorate in English Literature, has been teaching since the year 2004. He has been teaching following courses at U.G &P.G level: Introduction to Cognitive Social Sciences, Communication Skills and Documentation, Communication Skills & English, Professional & Business Communication and Behavioral Sciences.